Hi Laura:

Thank you for providing your email. I wanted to follow up both on my application sent in to you through the mail a few days ago, as well as provide to you the direct link to the type of transfer "rails" that I think would better suit my needs for transfer to and from the toilet without being bolted to the appliance of apartment management before I actually test it out for variable functionality.

First, with regard to the application, it had come through some verbal understanding from one or more of the many STATE government conversations - when I had earlier expressed my worry that the federal government's dishing out of various amounts of "stimulus checks" would send me over the limit of $2000 as a qualifier for some "benefit" programs without addressing or even mentioning how stimulus checks factor in to such "asset reporting" - that I was told by someone that stimulus money is not to be factored in and therefore not to be reported or factored by me or anyone else. I would like your explanation of that issue since the application you had me complete and sign under "penalty of (criminal) perjury" also did not raise that issue as a matter of concern.

After sending you my application through the mail however, I am being compelled - by the fact that I still see nothing in all of my written records that addresses this issue in any way whatsoever - to write to you separately to inform you that in the aftermath of being provided the most recent stimulus check, I did open up a new banking account for the sole purpose of doing my part to comply with the decree of the UNITED STATES CONGRESS in dedicating these funds for the sole purpose of "stimulating the American economy" through private sector spending down of those specialized funds.

The local bank that I have allocated for that purpose is the Black Hills Federal Credit Union, located here in Spearfish.

Second, with regard to chore services in the home, Barbara arrived here with numerous ailments about three weeks ago, staying for only a couple of weeks before then leaving again out of state late last week. Since then, "Colleen" - who introduced herself as a supervisor at the private servicing company the STATE has hired to assist me with chore services, meal preparation, and shopping as was indicated would be done with the application I sent back to you - has called me twice, first to schedule a first cleaning date of today, and then to reschedule for next Monday 5/3/21 instead because she was unable to make it today. She named to person who would actually be tending to me for only two hours per week (to include meal preparation and shopping, washing and drying laundry, dishes, dusting, sweeping and mopping, etc.) is named "Tara".

While someone from the STATE had informed me that the cost of this service was to be implemented with me in much the same way as "Meals on Wheels" on a "donation" basis, the application paperwork did not indicate this; but instead indicated that my "contribution" may be expected at between 8% and 16% of the total cost. The application also did not have any hourly or weekly or monthly rates to fully inform me of what those costs might be expected to amount to. I would like your explanation of that issue since the application you had me complete and sign under "penalty of (criminal) perjury" also did not raise that issue as a matter of well defined agreement.

Third, with regard to the specific transfer "rails" that I had located and you are having difficulty in locating now, please find the following direct link to that evasive disability mobility appliance. Thank you again for your diligence in helping me in the home along with DAKOTA AT HOME. I look forward to your answers to the two outstanding issues that have evaded me in writing by the STATE as referenced above.

Apparently, in just the past couple of months "Walk in Wheels" must have changed their CORPORATE persona to "Aidacare" (see the graphic below)

This seems to be an Australian company, but I think you can use the link to email them to see if they can lead you to anyone in America that handles their product line. The link below references a "global" URL. This image (Model #BTT155100) came from page 7 of their catalog.

I hope this helps.

Cordially yours,
